Hyannis High School Hyannis, Nebraska

Hyannis -- 1967

Dedication

It was Thornton Wilder who called it "Our Town." The love he expressed in his play is the same love we feel for Hyannis - nostalgia, sentiment, loyalty. In Nebraska's Centennial Year we feel especially grateful to all of the people who have worked to build this community. With this in mind, we dedicate the 1967 Longhorn to "Our Town."

Editor's Message

Since Nebraska has been a state for one hundred years, we, the co-editors, have strived to make the theme "Our Town" surround the actual statistics of this school year.

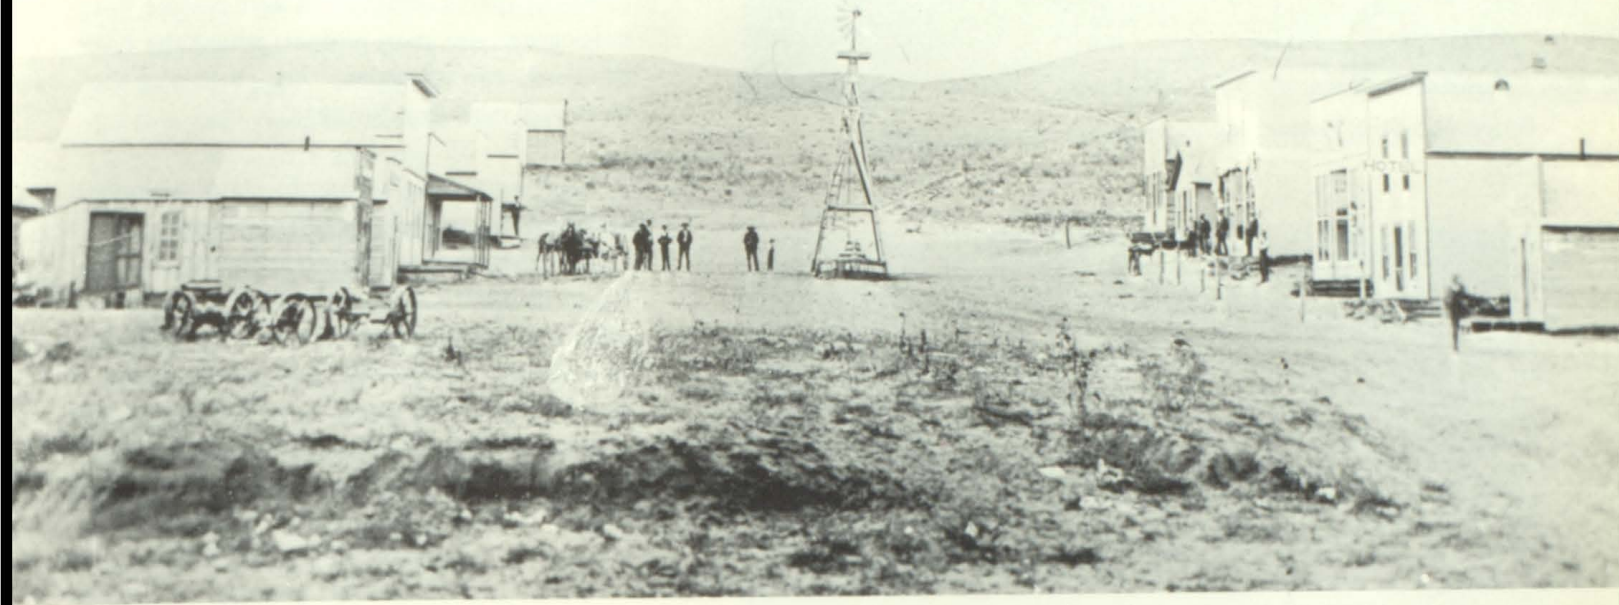

We have appreciated all the help we have had in coordinating the history of Hyannis with the history of this school year. We would also like to give special thanks to Mrs. Hale, Mr. Worley and Mr. Hale for their never-ending contributions toward the success of this yearbook.

Our Town

Hyannis was a dirty, dusty town in 1895.

Soddies provided comfort, if not glamor, for settlers.

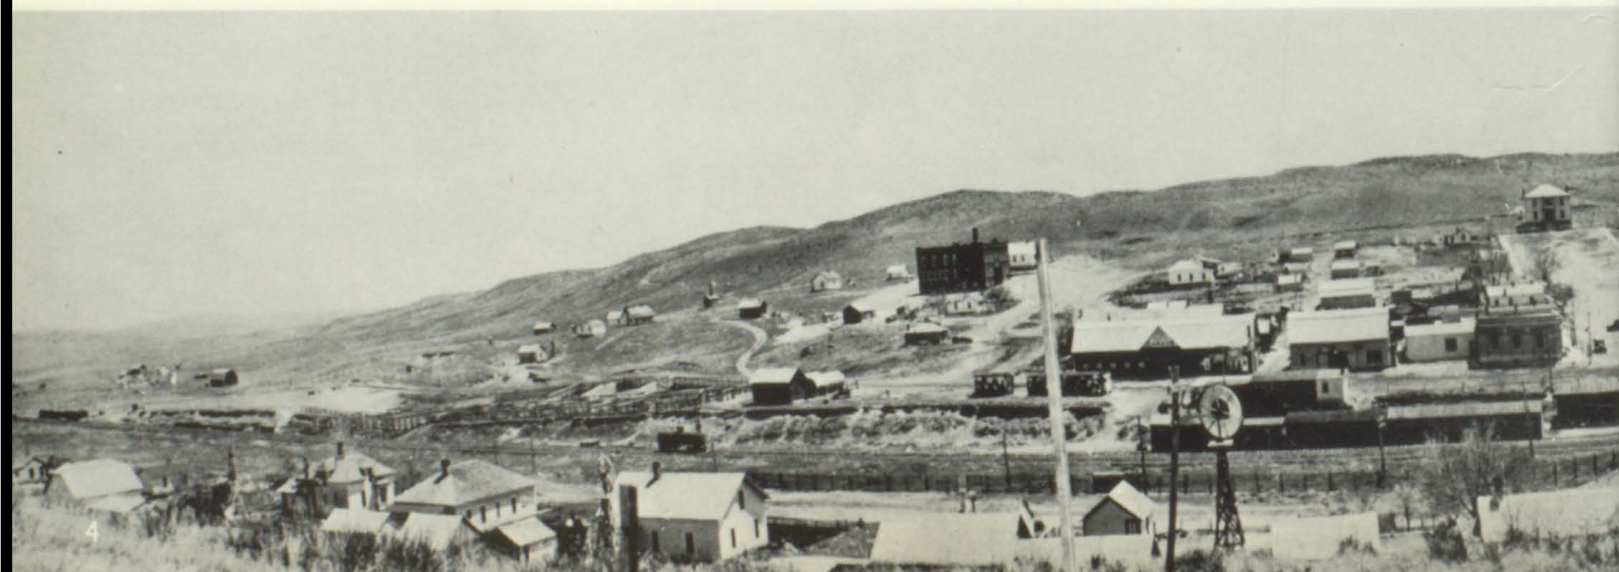

A traveling photographer recorded this moment for J. P. Sibbitt, George Moran, and Frank Moran.

The land. Always it is the land that determines man's destiny. Where Nature has been generous, men prosper; where she has skimped, life struggles. And so it is to the land that man pays homage.

Long ago, long before the dawn of human civilization, a huge inland sea lay in the rich and fertile area today known as the Nebraska Sandhills. As the ages passed, the waters left behind acre upon acre of rolling sand dunes. In the slow process of natural development, the dunes were stabilized with abundant, life-supporting grass which was to provide the basis for the now-booming economy.

Years passed, and this youthful nation became hungry for room and riches. This hunger motivated men to move west in search of a better life. Despite the earlier settling in many areas of Nebraska, Grant County remained unsettled until 1876, when the Nebraska legislature drew boundary lines and named the fledgling county for Ulysses S. Grant.

One large drawback to earlier settlement of the area was a lack of local governmental authority. With its natural remoteness, the country was an excellent retreat for outlaws and cattle rustlers; the ranchers had no protection except their own personal law enforcement. In 1886 Governor Thayer recognized the dilemma. His advisers suggested he appoint R. M. "Bud" Moran as sheriff to clean up the entire southern Sandhills area. This pioneer lawman succeeded, and law and order reigned. A note of interest is that the first case tried in court at Hyannis in 1887 was for cattle stealing.

The first county seat was in Whitman. Citizens of Hyannis, maintaining that they were more centrally located, brought the question to a vote. Although Hyannis was victorious, the change was not easy; when a delegation went to Whitman to procure the records, the Whitman residents refused to yield them. Two young men succeeded in getting them, took them to Hyannis, and guarded them until the bitter opposition subsided.

Early homesteads in Grant County consisted of 160, with additional claims of that amount allowed later for timber planting. Much later, in 1904, the Kincaid Act allowed persons to settle on 640 acres. The settlers, traveling in covered wagons or on horseback, came with little but courage and determination. Life was austere in their sodhouses as they endured Indian scares, blizzards, droughts, and prairie fires. Life today is easier, but the same pioneer virtues remain - the honesty, the basic hospitality to strangers, and the willingness to help a neighbor in need.

The town band, complete with uniforms, about 1900.

Bud Bowers and Ed Martz in the Martz Saloon, 1906.

This panoramic view of Hyannis, taken in May of 1919, was a triumph of early photography. By this time, the town looks solid and prosperous.

As the area grew, religious and civic activities were a natural development. The extension of the railroad in 1887 created new demands for institutions. The Congregational Church organized in 1889 and constructed a building in 1897. The Catholic Church was built in 1895. Other early community institutions included the Bank of Hyannis established in 1893 and a one-room frame school built in 1889. Hyannis citizens have long been interested in politics, and it was with great enthusiasm that they welcomed Teddy Roosevelt on his "whistle stop" speaking tour during the 1904 presidential campaign. Cultural activities included concerts and plays at the Opera House, as evidenced by the playbill at the right.

But ultimately it is the people themselves who are remarkable. Some could not endure the devastating hardships of homesteading and were forced to leave, and some established the vast cattle empires which exist today. Some were famous, and some passed each day routinely. But all, regardless of station or achievement, left their mark upon the area and the culture. In the Centennial year, it seems fitting to pay homage to these true pioneers.

Editor's Note: We express our deep gratitude to the Grant County Historical Society and Mrs. Richard Bilstein for the use of photographs and information for the text. We also express appreciation to Mr. Walt Stroud and Mr. H. E. McCawley for the loan of pictures.

The first street west of Main Street boasted houses with yards in 1895, but had little to offer in the way of trees. Traffic must have been light, considering the growth in the street itself.

Superintendent's Message

Now that the 1966-67 school year has become history, I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone involved for helping to make it the truly successful year that it was. I feel that teachers, parents, and students have combined in promulgating and perpetuating a "new spirit" of educational aspiration which is beneficial to both the school and the community.

This yearbook, the 1966-67 Longhorn, has been amalgamated with patience and care by Mrs. Hale and her fine staff, and it will serve as your kaleidoscope of the year's activities; I hope that you will refer to it many, many times.

Jim C. Adkisson

Principal's Message

Well, the time is fast coming when everyone is busy planning their summer activities. Some will be joyous ones, some sad ones. I would like to take this opportunity to tell each one of you that this has been a very enjoyable year for me. I do not know where a person could find a better student body for his first year as an administrator. I will say this: if you learned as much this year as I did, it was a very profitable year for all of us. I will be in Hyannis most of the summer and hope to see all of you at one time or another. I wish each one of you a very profitable and joyful summer.

CLASS MOTTO

"To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield -"

Because of the closeness of their cumulative averages over the four-year period, Judy Evans and Ethel Potthoff were named co-valedictorians.

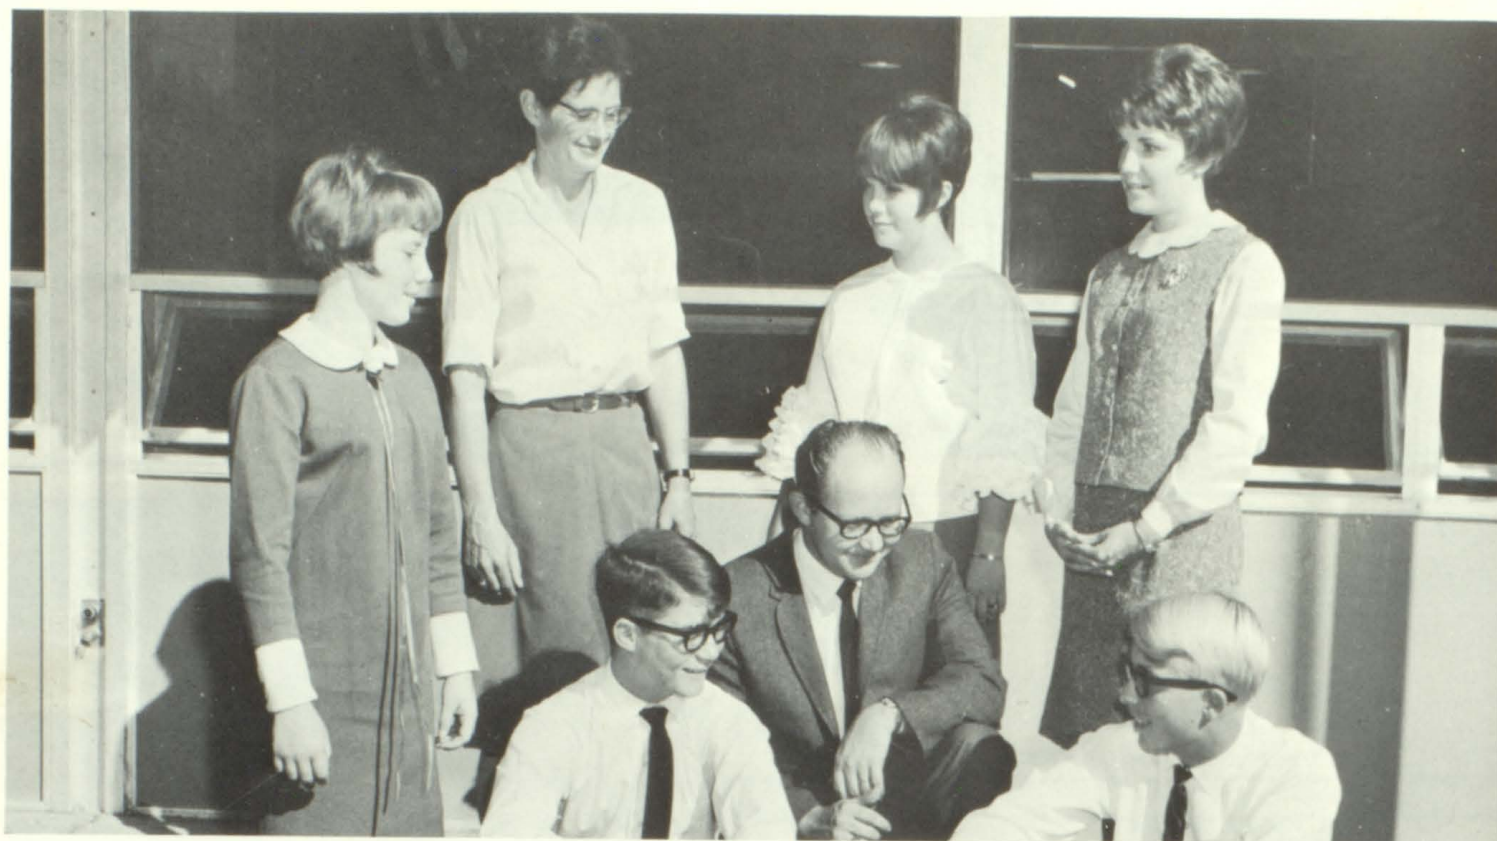

Before they knew it, the 1967 seniors were old graduates. All of the thrills and excitement were over, but the memories are real and lasting. In years to come, they may very possibly remember the time spent in school as "the best years of our lives."

The moments after graduation brought varied reactions from the seniors. . . great joy but a touch of sadness.

Junior High Music

The Gypsy Queen (Carol Blakey) and the Sorceress (Debbie West) conjure up an evil spell to thwart the wicked Kink.

A bright musical moment was the presentation of the Grant-Schaefer operetta, "White Gypsy," a tale of adventure and excitement as a princess struggles to regain a lost kingdom for its rightful ruler.

The cast entreats the Gyros to "Come Be a Gypsy Wild."

The Junior High cheerleaders and pep club did a very fine job in supporting their basketball team throughout the year. These girls are to be commended on their fine enthusiasm.

The Junior High athletic program was very successful this year, and these girls contributed to its success by making up a very fine volleyball team.

She delights everyone with her spicy rendition of the "Spanish Panic." Although the dance is intended to tire her so that she will sleep soundly, she fails to become sleepy.

Tension mounts as the members of the court wonder if the princess has passed the test - did she feel the pea which the queen hid under 21 mattresses?

She did! Now Dauntless and Winnifred will marry and live happily ever after, as the cast concludes that "A princess is a delicate thing."

Homecoming Royalty

Homecoming royalty this year was Bob Hayward, king attendant; Judy Evans, queen attendant; King Gary Bissell; Queen Ethel Potthoff; Mick McCawley, king attendant; and Pamela Shepherd, queen attendant. The Homecoming candidates were chosen through the Pep Club and H-Club, and the king and queen were elected by the student body. They were crowned during the halftime of the football game.

The King and Queen and attendants were honored by leading a dance.

Music for dance was furnished by the Chessmen.

A candid shot of dancing showed many young couples attending.

King Gary and Queen Ethel were again crowned at the dance.

Girl and Boy Staters

The 1967 delegates to Cornhusker Girls' and Boys' State were Cherie Kommers and Leonard Adam. The activity, sponsored each year by the American Legion and Legion Auxiliary, was held in Lincoln during the week of June 10-17. Activities included experiences in all phases of government. Alternate candidates were Darlene Daly and Dave Viall.

Elected by popular vote of the public, Queen Cherie Kommers and King Bob Hayward will reign for the following year of 1967. Attendants of the queen were Judy Evans and Vicki Dyer, and attendants for the king were Mick McCawley and Johnny Sibbitt. The candidates were chosen by the Pep Club and the H-Club by popular vote. The king and queen were crowned at the March of Dimes dance by last year's king and queen. Bob was a senior and Cherie was a Junior. Both were active in school activities.

Athletic Banquet

Many young people, as well as many parents, attended the banquet. All enjoyed themselves.

The new cheerleaders were named. They are, L to R: Becky Blaylock, Vicki Dyer, Barbara DeVoe, and Jeanne Kimble.

Two of the several speakers during the evening were Joe Ferguson and Don Tapley. Joe gave the Response, and Mr. Tapley spoke on the basketball season.

Junior-Senior Banquet

Juniors, Seniors, and dates and faculty members all enjoyed the banquet held at the Episcopal Parish Hall.

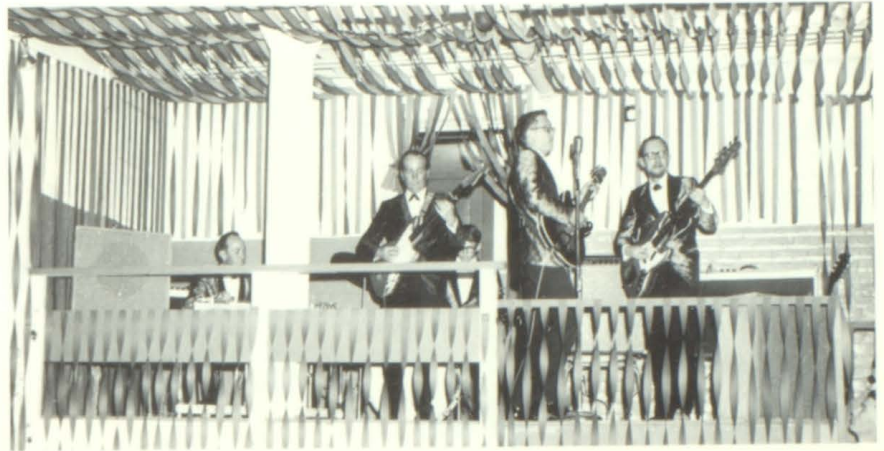

Rick Rothwell, Junior president, welcomed everyone to the banquet, and Gary Bissell, Senior president, gave the response.

The night's entertainment was provided by Billy and Rick Rothwell and Benjy Simpson as they sang the songs "China Town" and "I Left My Heart in San Francisco".

Junior-Senior Prom

Music for the Prom was provided by Hadley Barrett and the Westerners.

Waiting to be served in the cable car are, L to R: Jerry Merrihew, Dave Viall, Gary Bissell, and Doug Brennemann.

A large, brightly-colored dragon added to the Chinatown atmosphere. Across the room a San Francisco Bay mural added magic to the evening.

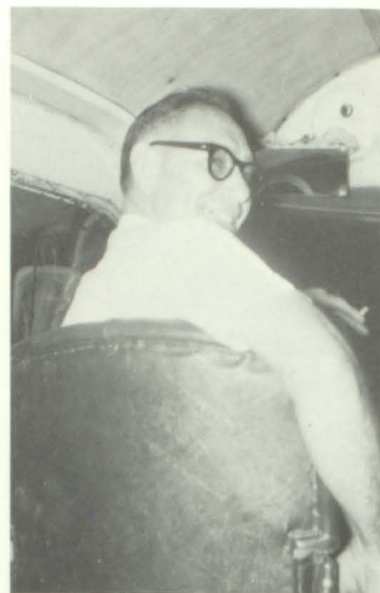

The theme for the Prom was "Frisco Frolic." Many people enjoyed the dance and were very pleased with the beauty and cleverness of the decorations.

Senior Sneak Trip

After five days of near panic, the class returned to prepare for another big event - graduation.

Here is the bus driver, Karl. He was a friend to all.

Keeping up the good old Nebraska spirit, the seniors made a "Go Big Red" sign to hang out their window.

Senior sponsor, Mr. Osborne, water skiing and only falling down once.

Here is one of the senior sponsors, Mr. Tapley, clowning it up.

The trip to the Lake of the Ozarks, Missouri, was a long-awaited thrill for the seniors. Activities at the resort included boating, fishing, swimming, water skiing, and the best of all - having fun. A side trip included a visit to the Kansas City Zoo.

Commencement 1967

As the sophomore ushers selected by the seniors, Jeanne Kimble and Johnny Sibbitt added glamor to the occasion.

Ethel Potthoff stirred the audience with her forceful valedictory address.

Commencement, that exciting event, came on May 17. An overflow crowd came to wish the seniors well. It was a night both solemn and joyous, as the seniors and their parents realized that one chapter in their lives was closed. As commencement speakers often say, the future now lies in their hands.

Judy Evans contributed additional ideas about life and learning in her valedictory address.

Mr. Adkisson presided at his last official activity at Hyannis High School. He recognized both the graduating seniors and the eighth graders.

Featured speaker for the evening was Dr. Robert Manley from Hiram Scott College. The noted ETV personality charmed the audience with his talk, "A Dish of Prunes."

The long-awaited moment for the seniors came when Dr. Howell presented the diplomas. Here Pam Shepherd receives hers.

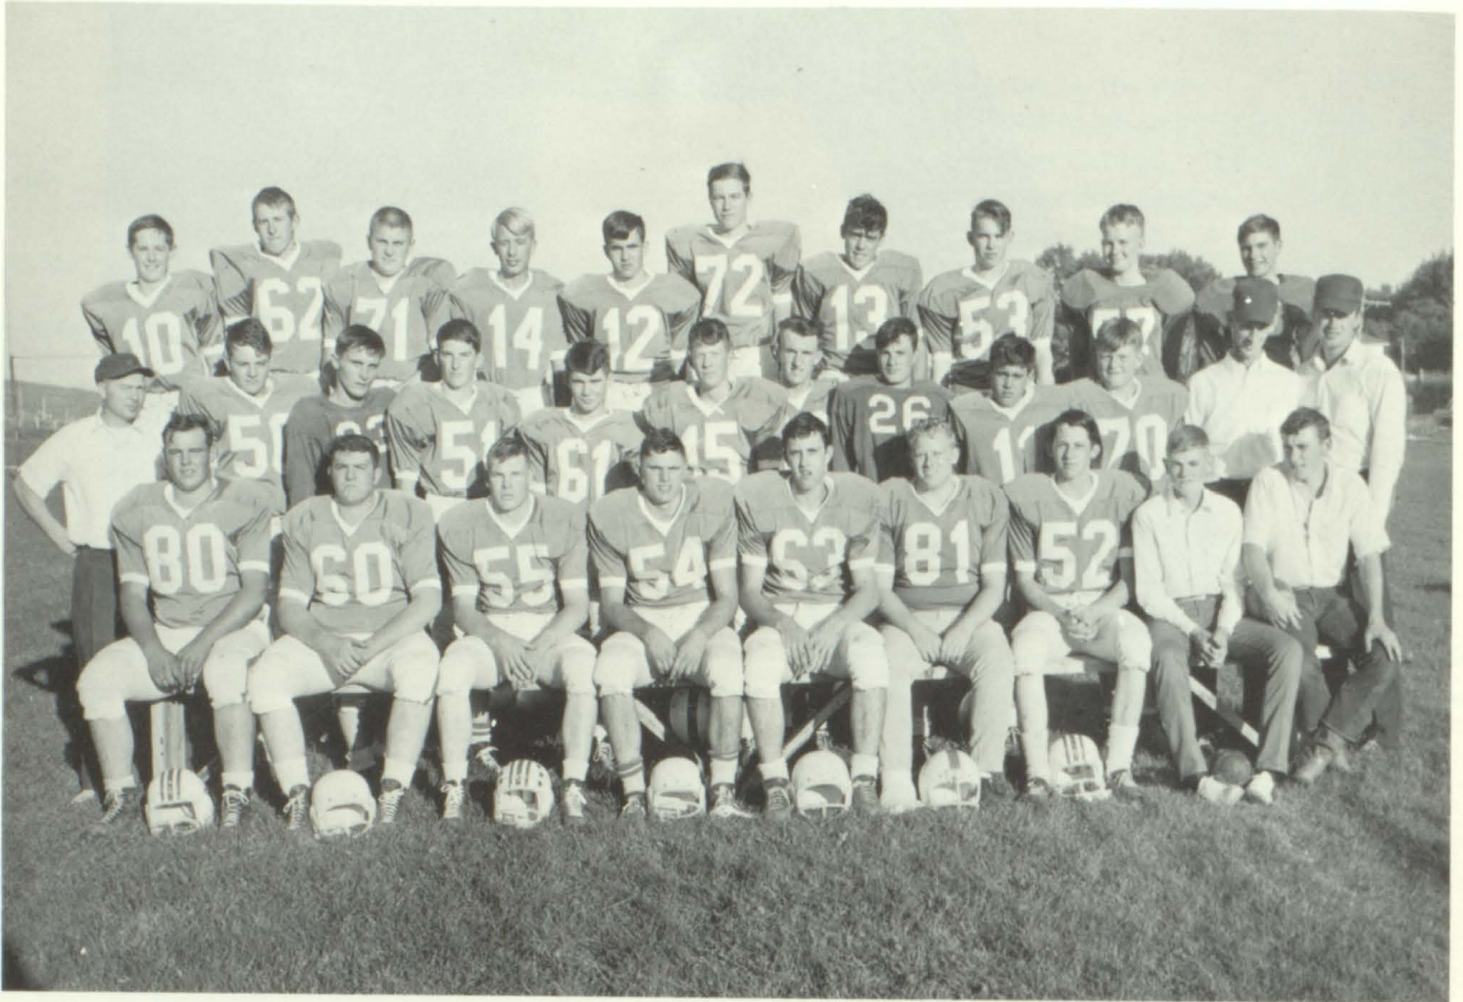

The seniors received congratulations from the community at the reception after the ceremony.
